Flexibility and customizable options allow you to use all the lessons in a topic or pick and choose the ones you'd like for your classroom.

Introduction Lesson

Engage students by activating prior knowledge about place and time to establish a foundation for learning and inquiry with clear learning objectives for the topic.

Learn the Events Lessons

Students dig in on key historical concepts, ideas, people, and events with an emphasis on cause-and-effect relationship, explanation, and continuity and change in history.

Inquiry Activity Lessons

Using Compelling Questions and inquiry, students develop their own questions, analyze primary and secondary sources, draw conclusions and communicate about them, and have opportunity to translate what they've learned into informed action.

Review and Apply Lesson

Students review and apply what they have learned about the topic through activities such as Making Connections to Today, Understanding Multiple Perspectives, and Writing and Reasoning Activities.

Spark Curiosity and Set the Course for Learning

Students engage with the topic, activate their prior knowledge, look ahead to what they will learn, and begin to consider the Compelling Questions.

Looking Ahead

You will learn the history of the civil rights movement in the United States between 1954 and 1978. While studying this time period, you will learn about segregation and other forms of discrimination that African Americans endured, and the strategies civil rights movement activists employed. You will see how the leaders of the modern civil rights movement were motivated by past struggles against inequality. And you will understand the changes that came about because of these protests.

You will examine Compelling Questions and develop your own questions about the civil rights movement in the inquiry lessons. Review the time line to preview some of the key events, people, and organizations that you will learn about.

What Will You Learn

In these lessons focused on the civil rights movement, you will learn:

- the historical causes of the civil rights movement.
- the key events in the history of the civil rights movement.
- the actions taken by significant individuals and important organizations within the civil rights movement.
- the effects of the civil rights movement.
- the legacy of the civil rights movement in the United States.

COMPPELLING QUESTIONS

- How did discrimination affect the daily life of African Americans before the civil rights movement?

READING STRATEGY

Analyzing Key Ideas and Details As you read, complete a graphic organizer similar to the one here by listing the techniques used to challenge segregation.

GUIDING QUESTION

What role did the NAACP play in the civil rights movement?

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) was established in 1909 to fight for the rights of African Americans. The NAACP convinced the U.S. Supreme Court to allow African American pilots to fly in World War II. The Tuskegee Army Airfield, a unit filled with black pilots, to be established. The NAACP also fought for the desegregation of these and other black soldiers during the war.

The NAACP gave African Americans the institutional support to fight racial discrimination and injustice. One founder in this movement was A. Philip Randolph—a union leader since the 1920s as well as a civil rights activist—who compelled President Franklin Roosevelt to issue an executive order ending segregation in the federal government.

During World War II, the NAACP fought for the desegregation of the military. It also fought for the desegregation of public facilities against segregated bus terminals to give up her seat to a white passenger in 1955.

The NAACP fought against the entrenchment of segregation. Back in 1946, the NAACP fought for desegregation to be constitutional in the "separate but equal" doctrine. The NAACP argued that separate facilities provided for African Americans were not of equal quality as those provided for white Americans.

keep the rides going. When President Kennedy found out that the Freedom Riders were still active, he ordered the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) to tighten its regulations against segregated bus terminals, and Attorney General Robert Kennedy ordered the Justice Department to take legal action against Southern cities that maintained segregated bus terminals. By late 1962, the committed work of activists began eliminating segregated interstate bus travel.

LESSON ACTIVITIES

1. Informative Writing Assume that you are a journalist at a college newspaper in 1960. Write an article for the newspaper describing the sit-in, including its participants, goals, and outcomes.

2. Presenting Work in groups of four to six. Each group will write, and present brief monologues for an audience of at least five people. Each monologue should be presented. Each monologue should be presented.

a gang of young men armed with baseball bats, chains, and lead pipes. The gang beat the riders viciously. Birmingham public safety commissioner Theophilus Eugene "Bull" Connor claimed that there had been no police at the bus station because it was Mother's Day, and he had given many officers the day off. FBI evidence later showed that Connor told the local Klan to beat the riders until "it looked like a bulldog got a hold of them." The violence made national news, shocking many Americans and drawing the federal government's attention to the plight of African Americans in the South.

Kennedy's Civil Rights Response

While campaigning for the presidency in 1960, John F. Kennedy made promises to support civil rights. Civil rights leaders, such as NAACP executive director Roy Wilkins, urged Kennedy to support civil rights

Reviewing the Civil Rights Movement

Summary

Origin of the Movement

During Reconstruction, Congress took some steps to protect African Americans' civil rights. But in 1896 the Plessy v. Ferguson decision allowed those rights to be severely curtailed by state statutes known as Jim Crow laws. These laws legalized segregation, restricting African American mobility, labor, and voting rights. Even where it was not enforced by law, de facto segregation limited African Americans' lives.

In response to institutional racism and segregation, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and other organizations began to chip away at Jim Crow laws by challenging them in court. The NAACP scored a major victory in 1954 when the U.S. Supreme Court struck down segregation in public education in Brown v. Board of Education. The decision caused some Southern governors to increase their resistance to integration.

The Montgomery Bus Boycott

One year after Brown v. Board, Rosa Parks's refusal to yield her seat on a city bus to a white man led to the Montgomery Bus Boycott. A young minister named Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., emerged as a leading voice of the civil rights movement during the boycott. After more than a year, the boycott and legal challenges achieved the desegregation of the city transportation system. That success inspired more resistance throughout the South and led to the formation of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC).

Also in 1955, two white men murdered 14-year-old Emmett Till. Till's death highlighted the dangers of racist violence protected by the Southern judicial system.

The Little Rock Nine

President Eisenhower had been reluctant to get involved in civil rights issues. After the governor of Arkansas used the National Guard to try to prevent nine African American students from integrating Little Rock's Central High School, Eisenhower intervened, ordering federal forces to protect the students and enforce integration at Central High School in 1957.

Sit-Ins and Freedom Rides

Civil rights activism continued into the 1960s, spearheaded by young college students. One group in Greensboro, North Carolina, used sit-ins to challenge segregation in public restaurants. Soon activists throughout the South staged sit-ins to protest segregation, many of them part of groups like the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) and the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), led by young leaders such as John Lewis and Diane Nash.

In 1961 a group of African American and white students challenged de facto segregation on interstate buses and terminals. The Freedom Riders were attacked by violent mobs and arrested in several cities. More Freedom Riders expanded the effort. President Kennedy finally sent in federal marshals to protect the riders, but tensions continued until the Interstate

D Making Connections to Today

The 50th anniversary of "Bloody Sunday" in Selma, Alabama, was remembered on March 7, 2015. President Barack Obama delivered a speech explaining the significance of Selma to the civil rights movement:

"... [T]here are places and moments in America where this nation's destiny has been decided. . . .

Selma is such a place. In one afternoon 50 years ago, so much of our turbulent history—the stain of slavery and anguish of civil war; the yoke of segregation and tyranny of Jim Crow; the death of four little girls in Birmingham; and the dream of a Baptist preacher—met on this bridge. . . .

The Americans who crossed this bridge, they were not physically imposing. But they gave courage to millions. . . .

Because of what they did, the doors of opportunity swung open not just for black folks, but for every American. Women marched for equality. Latinos marched through the streets. Americans, gay Americans, and people with disabilities—they all came together. . . .

"Bloody Sunday" 50th

The original Selma March on March 7, 1965, crossing the Edmund Pettus Bridge. The left photo, from March 7, 2015, shows President Obama, his family, and other dignitaries. Center left, in white shirt, his family, civil rights activists, and former President George W. Bush commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Selma, Alabama, march.

As President Obama notes in his speech, the civil rights movement, directly and indirectly, inspired other activist movements in the United States. Movements for Latino and Native American civil rights as well as the modern feminist and the LGBTQ movements learned from its original example.

ACTIVITY Podcast Presentation Select one of the other movements President Obama referenced in his speech and create a podcast that compares and contrasts it to the civil rights movement of the 1950s and 1960s. In what ways has the civil rights movement inspired this other movement? How were the movements similar? In what ways did they differ?

As you seek to answer these questions, focus on the following topics and explain the similarities and differences between the movements:

- The goals of each movement
- The methods used by each movement to achieve these goals
- The judicial or legislative successes of each movement

Use your student text, library, and online sources to research the movement. Then, for your podcast, describe events that help the listeners to visualize the significant moments captured in videos or photographs. Create and submit a bibliography citing the sources you used for your podcast. Publish and share your podcast with family, friends, or a larger audience.

fought against black domination. I have cherished the ideal of a democratic and free society in which all persons live together in harmony and with equal opportunities. It is an ideal which I hope to live for and to achieve. But if needs be, it is an ideal for which I am prepared to die.

—Nelson Mandela, statement at the Rivonia trial, April 20, 1964, from In His Own Words

Write a summary paragraph identifying the main ideas in Mandela's statement. Conclude by noting which parts of Mandela's ideal became reality.

E Building a Free Society

Several nations in the Middle East have struggled with tension between modern and traditional cultural practices. To some people in these nations, "modern" is associated with corruptive Western influences that undermine Islamic values. To others, modernizing industry, education, and social freedoms increases economic opportunities for everyone. Some of these tensions have focused on restrictions regarding expectations of gender roles and the rights of women. Turkey, under the rule of Atatürk, and Iran, under the Pahlavis and the Ayatollah Khomeini, illustrate some of these tensions, which are still present today.

ACTIVITY

Creating a Visual Presentation Using your textbook along with library and Internet resources, research information about the tensions between modernization and traditional culture in Turkey and Iran during the twentieth century and today. ### Background Information

Throughout the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, Western countries embarked on a campaign of imperialism and colonialism in a frantic bid to gain and maintain economic and political power. Peoples in territories around the world were subjected to colonial rule, as countries like Great Britain, France, and the United States exploited raw materials and opened new markets. In the process, imperial powers upended and disrupted traditional economic, cultural, social, and political structures.

While many colonized peoples organized and fought against colonial rule, it was not until the twentieth century that their efforts gained true momentum. The dream of independence became a reality for many as a result of World War II. War-torn countries in Europe were tasked with rebuilding at home, leaving few resources to maintain their now fragile empires. Activists, seeing their opportunity, agitated harder for independence, employing both

History & Civics Activity Challenging Segregation

The Selma March

Civil rights activists won a victory with the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which outlawed segregation and barred discrimination based on race, religion, sex (gender), and national origin. Still, more citizen action was needed to bring about change. While the Fifteenth Amendment had prohibited state and federal governments from denying citizens the right to vote based on race, many states, particularly in the South, enacted other laws to restrict voting. These included literacy tests and poll taxes.

In 1964, civil rights groups organized campaigns to register African Americans to vote. Their efforts and the violent response from other citizens, white nationalist groups, and law enforcement spurred passage of the Civil Rights Act. However, legal barriers to voting, intimidation, and violence against African Americans continued. So, in January 1965, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) and the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) joined forces to demand full protection of voting rights for African Americans. The next month, segregationists in Alabama attacked a nonviolent civil rights protest. Police beat protesters, killed one demonstrator, and jailed about 2,000 others. SCLC and SNCC began planning a mass march to take their demands for voting rights to Governor George Wallace. In Selma, Alabama, African Americans made up more than half of the population, but only 1 to 2 percent of them were registered voters. Activists marched 50 miles from Selma to the state capitol in Montgomery.

On March 7, SCLC's Hosea Williams and SNCC's John Lewis led about 600 protesters from Brown Chapel African Methodist Episcopal Church to the Edmund Pettus Bridge that led out of Selma. As they reached the bridge, they saw a law enforcement brigade and a so-called posse waiting to bar the way. After ordering the marchers to disperse, law enforcement attacked in what became known as "Bloody Sunday." Lewis and others were hospitalized. The events, seen on the nightly news, led to demonstrations in about 80 cities across the country. Two days later, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., who had helped organize the march, led more than 2,000 people to attempt another crossing. SCLC had also filed a petition to keep the state from blocking the demonstration. A federal district court judge had issued a restraining order against further protests pending his decision. Unwilling to violate the order, King turned the marchers back when confronted by state troopers. Later that day, known as "Turnaround Tuesday," three white protesters were attacked, and one died. Over the coming weeks, SNCC held a series of protests in Montgomery.

Meanwhile, the violent events prompted President Lyndon Johnson to act. On March 15, in a televised address, he called on Congress to pass the Voting Rights Act. Soon after, a federal judge ruled in the demonstrators' favor.

LESSON 02 • INQUIRY ACTIVITY

HISTORICAL THINKING SKILLS

Contrasting Life for White and African American Students Go online to Duke University's "Behind the Veil: Documenting African American Life in the Jim Crow South." Search the collection for "Gratton Interview" and then click the audio link titled "Charles Austin Gratton Interview." Play the interview for students from time marker 9:45 to 12:50. Lead a discussion with the whole class about Gratton's description of having to pass by newer and better "white only" schools to get to his older and run down "black only" schools. There is also a transcript of the interview for students who may need it.

WHOLE CLASS 15 MIN

Digital Option

Blog About Educational Inequity Instead of discussing Gratton's description of having to pass by newer and better "white only" schools to get to his older and run down "black only" schools, have students create a blog entry that focuses on educational inequity in schools. Students should create their own entry and respond to at least two other classmates' entries to foster discussion. SMALL GROUP 30 MIN

HISTORICAL THINKING SKILLS

Comparing Perspectives on Civil Rights Have students go online to the University of California at Santa Barbara's American Presidency Project (presidency.ucsb.edu) and search for "Remarks at Meeting of Negro Leaders Sponsored by the National Newspaper Publishers Association." Introduce the speech to students as the speech that inspired Jackie Robinson's letter in Primary Source E titled "Running Out of Patience." Direct students to read, beginning with the paragraph starting with "Now I realize" and ending at "itself create injustice." Assign students to compare Eisenhower's advice about patience with Robinson's call to action. SMALL GROUP 15 MIN

Special Needs

Strategy: Autism Spectrum Students on the Autism Spectrum (ASD) need routine breaks to allow internal and external stimuli to dissipate. After ASD students read and respond to Source D, allow them a break to reset and refresh in a quiet area or with sensory tools, prior to continuing onto Source E activities.

Culturally Responsive Connections

African American Athletes Protest at the 1968 Olympics African American athletes Tommie Smith and John Carlos gained international recognition and condemnation for raising their fists in the Black Power Salute while on the 1968 Olympic podium. In response, the Olympic committee stripped them of their gold and bronze medals respectively. Questions to Consider: Why do you think Smith and Carlos were stripped of their Olympic medals? (Giving the black power salute, was considered a criticism of the country on an international stage. Stripping them of their medals was a way to condemn the protests and their participation.) How would you feel if

Remembering Segregated Schools

Charles Gratton lived in Norwood, Alabama, during the Depression and World War II. His childhood memories of living in the segregated South highlighted the struggles he faced with unequal school opportunities.

PRIMARY SOURCE - TRANSCRIPT

“They also had a park. It was about a block from where I was born and raised and where I lived, and it was known as the white person's park. They had a tennis court there and nice park trees, and blacks weren't allowed in that park. I mean we just couldn't go there. You know, it's just one of those things.

Some days I would be sick, and I could hear the schoolchildren playing during their lunch hour down at Norwood Elementary School, which was all white, and that's what really stuck in my mind. I'd say, 'It's a shame that I have to walk so far to school every day.' When I'd hear those schoolchildren playing, I'd say, 'Here I am a block and a half from the elementary school, and I've got to walk six or seven miles to school every day.'

Even now, I can almost hear those kids, those white kids down at this elementary school playing, and the noise and laughing and playing, and I'm at home sick basically from the exposure of walking those six and seven miles to school every day. Whether it was raining or not, I had to go. So those are some of the memories that I have of my childhood growing up over at Norwood.”

—Charles Gratton, in Remembering Jim Crow: African Americans Tell About Their Life in the Segregated South

EXAMINE THE SOURCE

Interpreting Text Does Charles Gratton have the same feelings toward the segregated park as he does toward the unequal school access? Why or why not?

Running Out of Patience

On May 12, 1958, President Eisenhower addressed a meeting of African American leaders sponsored by the National Newspaper Publishers Association. Jackie Robinson, the first African American baseball player in the twentieth century to play in the major leagues, was in the audience. The next day, he sent the president a letter expressing his frustration with Eisenhower's advice to “have patience and forbearance” as the nation tackled the difficult problem of racial discrimination.

PRIMARY SOURCE - LETTER

“I was sitting in the audience at the Summit Meeting of Negro Leaders yesterday when you said we must have patience. On hearing you say this, I felt like standing up and saying, ‘Oh no! Not again.’

I respectfully remind you sir, that we have been the most patient of all people. When you said we must have self-respect, I wondered how we could have self-respect and remain patient considering the treatment accorded us through the years. 17 million Negroes cannot do as you suggest and wait for the hearts of men to change. We want to enjoy now the rights that we feel we are entitled to as Americans. This we cannot do unless we pursue aggressively goals which all other Americans achieved over 150 years ago. . . .”

—Jackie Robinson, letter to President Eisenhower, May 13, 1958

EXAMINE THE SOURCE

- Interpreting Text To what is Robinson referring when he mentions pursuing goals other Americans achieved over 150 years ago?
- Infering What point do you think Robinson hopes to convey by making this connection to the goals that others achieved in the past?

EXAMINE THE SOURCE ANSWERS

PRIMARY SOURCE D

Gratton is bothered by both the segregated park and the unequal school access, but comparing his comment “it's just one of those things” about the park to his extensive memory of having to walk so far to school shows that he was more upset by the unequal school access.

PRIMARY SOURCE E

- Robinson is referring to the American Revolution and the promise of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness that is mentioned in the Declaration of Independence.
- Possible answer: I think Robinson wants Eisenhower to think about how long it has been since the United States won the American Revolution and established a nation based on liberty. Ever since then, African Americans have been waiting for that liberty to be given to them. To be told to continue waiting patiently is frustrating to Robinson.

Assess Your Way

Formative and summative assessments help you track progress and address individual student and whole-class needs. Assessment options include:

Topic 14 Preassessment

DIRECTIONS: Multiple Choice Indicate the answer choice that best completes the statement or the question.

_____ 1. The court case Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka ruled that

- segregated public schools were unconstitutional.
- excluding African Americans from juries was unconstitutional.
- the "separate but equal" doctrine was constitutional.
- Congress could ban discrimination in public facilities.

_____ 2. What group, established in 1909, pushed for African American civil rights by using a system?

- CORE
- AFL-CIO
- SNCC
- NAACP

_____ 3. Civil rights activist Rosa Parks is known for

- organizing the March on Washington.
- helping pass the Civil Rights Act.
- refusing to give up her seat on a segregated bus.
- organizing the Freedom Riders.

Student Instructions for the Hands-On Topic Project

The Civil Rights Movement

Desegregation's Unintended Consequences

Project Question

- What were the experiences of African Americans after segregation ended?

Project Summary

Think about segregation in the United States and the goal of the civil rights movement. Using primary and secondary sources, you will examine the effects of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. In particular, you will analyze the positive changes and the unintended consequences that desegregation had on businesses owned by African Americans. You will work collaboratively in a group to write a research report that evaluates the intentional and unintentional effects of ending segregation.

Groups will be responsible for creating a task list and dividing tasks among members. Arrange for tasks to be completed based on your group members' strengths or unique talents. Every member will have a task and participate in the creation of the research report.

The research report will include data that show how desegregation affected businesses owned by African Americans in the 1960s and 1970s. The report will also include anecdotes from _____ to show how the end of segregation affected them. Deliver your _____ experts.
