The Most Revered Chronicling of African American History of our Time

Since its first edition in 1947, From Slavery to Freedom: A History of African Americans has contextualized the black experience squarely within American history, a narrative that previously denied black contribution or at best dismissed its importance. An ever-growing mountain of scholarship on African Americans informs the book’s discussion of several topics, from the development of metallurgy in ancient African civilizations through the story of black life in the British colonies to the emergence of social movements and activism in communities across the United States from the mid-twentieth century to present day. This edition of From Slavery to Freedom also incorporates new historical actors, including the role of women throughout history, particularly in slavery, abolitionism, the Jim Crow era, and the civil rights/black power movement.

From Slavery to Freedom was written by the late John Hope Franklin, the legendary, award-winning scholar and preeminent historian of African American History. In 1995 President Bill Clinton conferred on Franklin the Presidential Medal of Freedom in recognition of his scholarship in chronicling the African American experience and specifically for his work on this classic title. The 9th and 10th editions introduce co-author, Evelyn Brooks Higginbotham, former Chair of the African American Studies Department and member of the History Department at Harvard University.

This new High School edition includes:

- Updated discussion of topics based on the latest historical scholarship.
- “Window in Time” features that provide unique vantage points and first-hand views that render multiple, and sometimes conflicting, voices of the past.
- “Shifting Terrains in the New Century,” that updates the discussion of African American history through the year 2020.
- High school appropriate overviews, learning objectives, and key terms with definitions.
- End-of-chapter assessments crafted for the high school classroom.
- By the Way online feature that links to articles and information covering current events.
- An online High School Teacher Manual with strategies, lessons, and suggested activities appropriate for the high school classroom.
